The Methodist Church

South Warwickshire Circuit

Registered charity no. 1154830

Superintendent Minister: Rev Dr Iain Ballard

The Gospel reading assigned for the 6th Sunday of Easter is John 15:9-17, part of Jesus' discourse to his disciples before his arrest and crucifixion. In it, Jesus gives the command "that you love one another as I have loved you." We give great attention to the command to love one another, love your neighbour and so on, and rightly so, because they are very important. We look at the continuation of this passage, in which Jesus says that the greatest love of all is to lay down one's life for one's friends, which of course is what he did for us. But I think we sometimes fail to notice what the passage is saying to each and every one of us: love one another, as I have loved you.

How has God loved us? Eternally, unconditionally and lavishly, that's how. God's love came first, it is not dependent on our worthiness or our efforts. It is simply there – always was, always will be. Many of us rail against that. We want to earn God's love, to deserve it, whereas all God wants us to do is accept it.

I wonder what difference it would make in our relationships and our churches if we were able, however imperfectly, to love one another as God has loved us? Without demand or expectation, without requiring the other to become different to what they are?

There are demands made on disciples, there can be no doubt of that. But they are not the things we need to do to earn God's love – they are the things we do because we know in our bones that we are loved by God. Ponder that. Rest in that. And then, maybe, you will reflect more of it to those around you, without even trying.
